Compusult Awarded Sourcewell Cooperative Contract

Expanding Opportunities in Government Procurement

August 11, 2025

(Chantilly, Virginia) — Compusult, a leader in Public Safety Incident Command Software is proud to announce its recent award of a Sourcewell cooperative purchasing contract in the Public Safety Software category. This allows Compusult to expand its offerings – particularly its product called Web Enterprise Suite Incident Command System (WES ICS) – to public agencies across North America.

Sourcewell, a self-funded governmental organization established in 1978, facilitates a cooperative purchasing program that harnesses the collective purchasing power of more than 50,000 participating agencies. By streamlining procurement with pre-negotiated, competitive contracts, Sourcewell enables government, educational, and nonprofit organizations to secure cost-effective and efficient purchasing solutions.

Compusult secured a Sourcewell contract following a rigorous request for proposal (RFP) process, ensuring compliance with local procurement requirements, and delivering exceptional value and service. This partnership grants any public agency access to purchase from Compusult through a ready-to-use, Sourcewell-vetted contract, streamlining the public purchasing process.

Michael Kennedy, President of Compusult, is excited about the new collaboration. "We are honored to have been selected by Sourcewell. Compusult's expertise in public safety and emergency management software will allow us to bring our solutions to even more cities, counties, states and provinces who need an integrated system for managing challenging events like fires, floods, and extreme heat and cold."
